

I am responsible for Research Development & Technological innovation in Versalis
I am a chemical Engineer and I started working for EniChem (former name of Versalis) in 1997. In 2009 I attended to a General Management executive master.
I spent my career mainly in the technical field as process engineer for plastics production, then as responsible for the Versalis' Research Centre in Mantova (italy) and, before the current duty , I was responsible for R&D network and new technological platform development
I also held managerial positions in Marketing and Operations
